PlanPath

One weekly rhythm for small operations teams

Investor pitch deck | Free preview (3 of 13 slides)

Sample only. PlanPath, names, and all figures are fictional placeholders.

Weekly plans live in five places, so nothing gets finished

Fragmented tools

Priorities sit in chat, tasks in a spreadsheet, and dates in a calendar. Each week someone rebuilds the picture by hand.

Slow weekly reviews

Leads spend a few hours each week collecting status before a meeting can start. The meeting then covers what already happened.

Dropped follow-ups

Commitments made in meetings slip between teams because no single list holds the owner, the due date, and the next step.

One shared weekly rhythm: plan, track, review

Plan

Set three priorities and map the week on one shared page.

Track

Each item has an owner, status, and follow-up date. Updates take seconds.

Review

A generated weekly summary shows what moved, what stalled, and what needs a decision.

Designed for teams of 5 to 40 people who run operations week to week.
